Tea Debuts Women's Clothing Collection for Fall '10

San Francisco, California, September 2010

Tea (www.teacollection.com), the globally-inspired designer clothing company, recently announced the launch of their women's clothing collection for Fall 2010. And just like Tea's children's clothing line, the women's fashions are inspired by Tea's global journeys of discovery.

"It's been a passion project of mine," notes Emily Meyer, Tea's Chief Creative Officer and Co-founder. "From the launch of our first children's collection in 2002, women have asked us, when are you going to bring your distinct design sense and your global spirit to clothes for us." This first women's collection uses colors, textiles, and silhouettes that look to capture the beauty, color, and diversity of Hungary, Romania and Croatia.

Drawing from diverse inspirations, this modern, wearable collection of sweaters, layering pieces, and scarves is full of the rich tones and patterns found in the decorative arts and architecture of Budapest and the hand-woven blankets of Romania. The collection pays homage to Tea's roots in sweaters, with the luxurious and handmade feel that comes from natural fibers like pima cotton and merino wool.

The collection of sweaters, knit tops, and scarves is available online at www.teacollection.com. The prices for the current line range from $52 to $198.
